

6.S196/PPAT Client Matching and Team Formation

September 2011

This sheet will help us understand your preferences for the purposes of (A) matching you to a client, and (B) matching you to one or more teammates with complementary skills.

Referring to the client descriptions, and keeping in mind your skills and interests, please group each of the clients into one of the categories below: excited (you would be excited to work with this client); neutral (you don't have any strong positive or negative feelings about working with this client); or mismatch (you don't think you match this client). You may put as many clients as you wish into each category, but put as many clients into the "excited" category as you can honestly manage to.

We will do our best to match every student with a client whom s/he is excited about working with, and to form teams with members whose skills are complementary. We will distribute match information by the end of this week.

Note that some clients, even though they have committed to working with student teams, may change their minds on short notice. We hope and expect that this won't happen, but if it does, we will quickly match your team to another client.

Your name: _____

Excited

Please list below the clients with whom you would be excited to work.

Neutral

List project descriptions that don't produce particularly positive or negative feelings.

Mismatch

Finally, please list below the clients who you think are not a good match for your skills and/or interests.

Other Matching/Teaming Information

State here anything else you want, e.g. students who you strongly wish to (or prefer not to) team with.
